INTRODUCTION

The Unveiling of Their New Tactic

The COVID-19 “pandemic” has brought about unprecedented changes to our way of life, and the global response to the virus has been equally unprecedented. Governments and health authorities around the world have implemented a range of measures to control the spread of the virus, including lockdowns, social distancing, and vaccination campaigns. One of the more controversial measures that have emerged in recent months is the use of global tracking systems to monitor the movement and activities of the unvaxxed.

Global tracking of the unvaxxed involves the use of digital tools and technologies to collect and analyze data on the vaccination status and location of individuals. This information is then used to identify populations that are at higher risk of infection, track the spread of the virus, and inform public health policies and interventions. While some argue that this is necessary to protect public health and control the spread of the virus, others see it as an invasion of privacy and a violation of individual rights.

The global government’s “justification” for this invasive method is that it is necessary to identify and control the spread of the virus. However, the real intention behind this approach may be far more malevolent. The use of global tracking systems to monitor the unvaxxed raises concerns about the potential for abuse and manipulation, and the use of technology to control people’s movements and behavior.

Throughout history, there have been numerous examples of governments and other entities using technology to control and manipulate populations. From the use of propaganda to the creation of surveillance states, technology has been used to exert power and control over people in a variety of ways. The use of global tracking systems to monitor the unvaxxed is just the latest example of this trend.

Those who oppose global tracking of the unvaxxed argue that it is a violation of individual rights and privacy. They argue that individuals have the right to make their own choices about their health and that the use of tracking systems to monitor their movements and activities is an unacceptable infringement on their privacy. Additionally, they argue that the use of systems to track the unvaxxed is unjust and discriminatory.

One of the most concerning aspects of global tracking of the unvaxxed is the potential for abuse and manipulation. Governments and other entities with access to this information could potentially use it to target and manipulate individuals or groups, or to enforce their own agendas. The use of technology to control and manipulate people’s behavior is a dangerous trend that must be resisted.

We need to be vigilant and stand up for what is right, even in the face of opposition. We must be aware of the potential dangers of global tracking of the unvaxxed and be prepared to resist any attempts to use technology to control and manipulate us. As Proverbs 29:10 states, “The bloodthirsty hate a person of integrity and seek to kill the upright.” We must remain true to our values and principles and stand up against any attempts to use technology to undermine our autonomy and individual rights.

HOW THE GLOBAL GOVERNMENT IS TRACKING THE UNVAXXED

The COVID-19 “pandemic” has led to unprecedented measures by governments around the world to control its spread, or at least this is what they want us to believe. One of the most significant measures has been the development and distribution of so-called vaccines for which there is clear evidence to prove their dangers.

The global governments argue that despite the availability of “vaccines”, there are still a significant number of people who are choosing not to get vaccinated. This has led some governments to take extreme measures, such as tracking the unvaccinated.

Tracking the unvaxxed refers to the practice of monitoring individuals who have not received a COVID-19 jab. This can involve various methods, including the use of vaccine passports, digital tracking, and contact tracing. The global governments claim that the goal of these measures is to “encourage vaccination and reduce the spread of the virus.”

However, the practice of tracking the unvaccinated has raised serious concerns about privacy, civil liberties, and the role of governments in personal healthcare decisions. Some argue that these measures infringe on individual freedoms, while others maintain that they are necessary to protect public health.

As the COVID-19 “pandemic” continues to evolve, the debate over tracking the unvaccinated is likely to continue. It is important to equip ourselves with the right knowledge of what is actually going on so that we can make informed decisions for ourselves instead of being manipulated into the global government’s agenda (which we will cover).

Are We Actually Getting Tracked?

Many believe that this is all just “overthinking” and is all just one big conspiracy. Without proper research, one could side with their argument. However, too much evidence suggests otherwise.

Contrary to the current definition of truth, evidence outweighs opinions. Why? Evidence is based on factual information that has been gathered through scientific research, experimentation, observation, or other reliable methods. Conversely, opinions are subjective and can be influenced by personal biases, emotions, and beliefs.

When making decisions or forming judgments, we must rely on evidence rather than opinions because evidence provides a more accurate and objective understanding of the world around us. Evidence-based approaches help us to make informed decisions that are more likely to produce positive outcomes and minimize negative consequences.

Moreover, evidence can be reproduced and tested by others, while opinions cannot. This means that evidence can be used to build upon existing knowledge and create new theories, while opinions are limited by personal experience and perspective.

Evidence allows us to have an objective, reliable, and reproducible basis for making decisions and forming judgments.

With this understanding, the evidence we will soon be covering will equip us with more than enough knowledge to expose legitimate crimes against humanity. You will learn how global governments are actually tracking the unvaxxed and purposefully making life more difficult for them in order for them to succumb to taking their “solution”.

Let’s begin...

How are We Getting Tracked?

At first, this sounds quite extreme, like something out of a sci-fi movie, but this is the real world. As discussed in our other E-book, 4000 Patents, COVID-19 and the “pandemic” were long premeditated.

This was all in an attempt to reduce the world’s population, according to Bill Gates. As stated in his TedTalk in 2010, “The world today has 6.8 billion people, that’s heading up to about 9 billion. Now if we do a really great job on new vaccines, healthcare, reproductive services, we could lower that by about 10-15%.” While news outlets may try to cover up what he meant, there is no other context for him to have meant any other meaning than the reduction of population.

Now after the rollout of the “vaccine” for COVID-19, the government noticed a significant group of people that refused to get vaxxed. People were seeing the truth for themselves and began standing up against the agenda.

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

As shown throughout history, when a unified group of people comes together with a single focus, massive changes take place. From this, the global governments recognized this threat and began tracking the unvaxxed.

Both the unvaxxed and those who aren't up-to-date on their COVID shots are being monitored. They are also tracking the reasons for those that refuse to take their "solution". One of the biggest methods is through fingerprinting. Through this, global governments are able to track us. Now before we explore further into this method, we must look at the reasons behind this.

The Purpose Behind Global Tracking

The purpose behind the tracking of the unvaxxed is one many "sheeple" will scoff at. The reason behind all of the tracking is linked to the push of COVID vaccine passports and digital IDs.

A recently discovered report made by Dr. Robert Malone revealed that a covert surveillance program developed by the U.S. National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS), a division of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), has reportedly been used to monitor individuals who have not received the so-called vaxx or have only received partial doses. The program was launched on April 1, 2022, but was not widely adopted by most medical facilities in the U.S. until January 2023.

As part of this initiative, healthcare providers in clinics and hospitals have been directed to inquire about patients' vaccination status, which is subsequently included in their electronic medical records using a diagnostic code called the ICD-10 code, without their awareness or consent. This allows them to be monitored, not only within the healthcare system but also beyond it.

Additionally, they are monitoring non-adherence to other suggested vaccines through the use of novel ICD-10 codes, and have created codes to clarify the reasons behind an individual's decision not to receive a suggested vaccine.

Furthermore, they have incorporated a billable ICD code for "vaccine safety counseling." Again, it is important to remember that this ALL ties into the push for COVID vaccine passports and digital IDs.

THE SECRET TRACKING PROGRAM REVEALED

Secrecy has been a tool used by governments throughout history to protect their interests and agendas from public scrutiny. In some cases, governments have gone to great lengths to cover up their actions, leading to mistrust and disillusionment among citizens.

One of the most infamous examples of government secrecy is the Watergate scandal in the United States. In 1972, five men were caught breaking into the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex in Washington, D.C. It was later revealed that the break-in was part of a larger effort by President Richard Nixon's administration to spy on political opponents and cover up illegal activities.

The Watergate scandal led to a series of investigations and, eventually, Nixon's resignation from the presidency in 1974. The scandal highlighted the dangers of government secrecy and the importance of a free press in holding those in power accountable.

Another example of government secrecy and cover-up is the Tuskegee Syphilis Study. Between 1932 and 1972, the U.S. Public Health Service conducted an unethical medical experiment on 399 Black men in Tuskegee, Alabama.

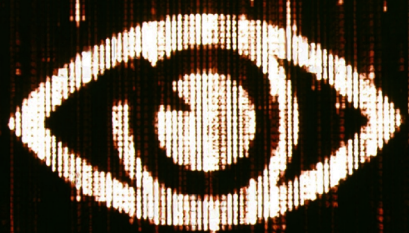

The men were told they were being treated for "bad blood," but in reality, they were left untreated for syphilis, even after a cure became available. The study was conducted without the informed consent of the participants, and many suffered severe health consequences as a result.

The Tuskegee Syphilis Study was not made public until 1972 when a whistleblower leaked information to the press. The revelation led to public outrage and a congressional investigation, which ultimately led to reforms in the regulation of medical research.

Governments have also used secrecy to cover up military operations and foreign interventions. In the 1970s, the U.S. government secretly bombed Cambodia during the Vietnam War, killing thousands of civilians. The bombing campaign was conducted without the knowledge or consent of Congress or the American people.

Similarly, the U.S. government's involvement in the overthrow of democratically elected governments in Latin America during the Cold War was kept secret for many years. The CIA supported coups and installed puppet regimes in countries like Chile, Guatemala, and Nicaragua, all in the name of stopping the spread of communism.

These actions had devastating consequences for the people of those countries and eroded trust in the U.S. government. More recently, governments have used secrecy to cover up their surveillance activities. In 2013, former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden leaked classified documents revealing the extent of the U.S. government's surveillance of its own citizens and foreign governments.

The revelations sparked a global debate about privacy and government surveillance, with many arguing that the government had overstepped its bounds and violated basic human rights.

The use of secrecy and cover-ups by governments is not limited to the United States. In China, the government has a long history of censorship and propaganda to control the flow of information and maintain its grip on power.

The Chinese government's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic has been criticized for its lack of transparency and censorship of information about the virus.

In Russia, the government has been accused of using propaganda and disinformation campaigns to influence foreign elections and sow discord in Western democracies. The use of social media and other online platforms to spread false information has become a powerful tool in the Russian government's efforts to manipulate public opinion.

The consequences of government secrecy and cover-up can be far-reaching, affecting everything from public health and safety to international relations and human rights. It erodes trust in government institutions and undermines the democratic process. It is essential that citizens hold their governments accountable and demand transparency and openness in all aspects of governance.

These are just a few examples of government secrecy and cover-up throughout history that illustrate the dangers of unchecked government power and the importance of transparency and accountability. Now we are faced with a new deception that the global governments claim is for our protection—the tracking of their own citizens!

What is Fingerprinting?

Fingerprinting is a method of uniquely identifying users or devices based on a wide range of data points that can be collected from their browser or device. These data points can include information about the user's browser type, screen resolution, installed fonts, browser plugins, and other device-specific details.

By analyzing these data points, a digital "fingerprint" of the user or device can be created, which can then be used to track their activities across multiple websites or online platforms.

The traditional uses were for things like when a crime is committed, investigators often collect fingerprints from the scene of the crime. If a suspect is identified, their fingerprints can be compared to those found at the scene to determine if they were involved in the crime.

Or to identify travelers entering or leaving their borders. In some cases, this is done to verify the identity of the traveler, while in other cases it may be used to identify individuals who are on watch lists or who are wanted by law enforcement agencies.

FLAGGED

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

Unlike traditional tracking methods like cookies, which are small data files that are stored on a user's device and can be deleted or blocked, fingerprinting is much more difficult for users to control or detect. Because fingerprinting relies on a wide range of data points, many of which cannot be easily controlled by users, it can be much more persistent and resistant to attempts to block or limit it.

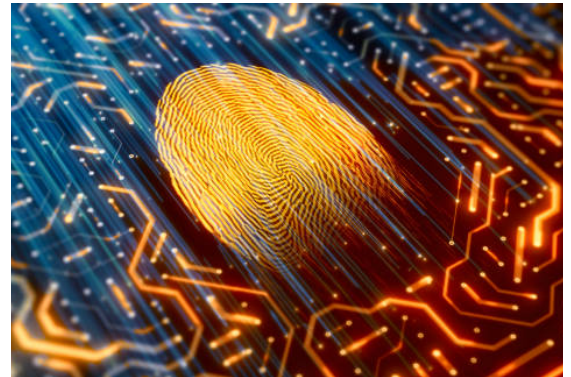

Here's the catch, this same technology that can be used for good, is also being used for the malicious biosecurity agenda of the global governments. This agenda is the implementation of vaccine passports.

How is Fingerprinting Being Used Against the Unvaxxed?

By this point, we know what the biosecurity agenda is and its purpose. How does this affect us, the unvaxxed?

Below is a statement from Malone:

"Code Number Z28.310 listed above is not a code for an illness or diagnosis, but rather for non-compliance of a medical procedure ... Once a person's vaccination status is coded and uploaded into a large database, it can be accessed by government and private health insurers alike.

"The administrative state officers at the CDC have not made immunization status a reportable disease (yet) but immunization status is listed as one of the reasons for mandatory reporting. They are just one step away from being able to collect this information without your permission. Ergo: vaccine passports made easy. In this country, not having your vaccine records 'up-to-date' might mean:

- The government will not restrict your travel, but airlines will.
- The government will not restrict your travel, other nations will.
- The government will not restrict your travel, auto rental companies will.
- The government will not restrict your travel, public transport will.
- The government will not restrict your travel, private companies will."

Based on this, we can see how this deceitful form of "freedom" manipulates the perception of the vaxxed.

Those that blindly believe what the global governments say will believe that all of this is done with their best intentions in mind. Obviously, this is false just based on the facts.

We as the unvaxxed will be manipulated and controlled through extremely covert means that the "sheeple" will deny as legitimate when we point it out. I urge you to remember, this is NOT normal and you are NOT alone in this.

The New Weapon

The International Classification of Diseases (ICD) is a system of medical classification developed and maintained by the World Health Organization (WHO). The ICD codes are used to classify and code diagnoses, symptoms, and medical procedures for billing, research, and statistical purposes.

In most countries, doctors are required to use these codes to describe a patient's condition and the care they received during their visit. The use of these codes ensures that medical data is uniform and consistent, making it easier for healthcare professionals to communicate and share information.

However, there are some exceptions. Private practice doctors who do not accept insurance may not be required to use these codes, as they do not need to submit insurance claims or participate in government-regulated healthcare programs. The claims are that even these doctors may find it beneficial to use ICD codes to maintain accurate medical records and communicate with other healthcare providers.

The reality is that the WHO signed off tracking codes.

Malone highlighted the significance of the World Health Organization's (WHO) authority over the International Classification of Diseases (ICD) system, as it implies that the WHO had to approve the addition of new codes by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). This suggests that the newly added codes for COVID-19 vaccination status may be used worldwide, although this has not been confirmed yet.

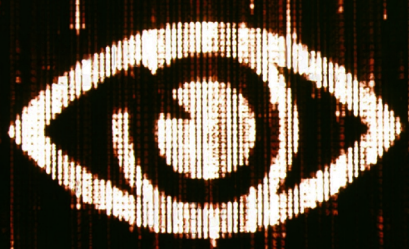

These codes are crucial for electronic health records and insurance billing, as well as for tracking and analyzing disease trends at national and global levels.

With the transition to electronic record-keeping, statistical analyses using ICD codes have become more accessible over the last decade. In the United States, the ICD coding system has been fully integrated into the electronic health record system since 2012.

The CDC is using a category within the ICD-10 codes, called ICD-10-CM, to track COVID-19 vaccination status. This category includes codes for individuals who are "Unvaccinated for COVID-19" or "Partially Vaccinated for COVID-19."

The act of recording the unvaxxed COVID-19 vaccination status is a gross violation of medical privacy rights. This is especially true since an individual's decision to get vaccinated or not is a private matter protected under the Privacy Act of 1974.

There is no justifiable reason for recording an unvaxxed's refusal as it is not part of their disease profile. Additionally, these records can be accessed by individuals beyond an individual's personal doctors, further violating their medical privacy.

FLAGGED

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

Despite the clear legal protections for medical privacy, privacy rights have been repeatedly violated and broken during the COVID-19 pandemic. For instance, children's vaccination statuses have been shared with schools, and employers have been granted the right to know the vaccination status of their employees.

Private venues have even been allowed to demand proof of vaccination status. All of this has occurred without any revocation or amendment to the law.

It is important to note that the newly added codes for COVID-19 vaccination status are not solely focused on an individual's health. They are also being used to track reasons for vaccine refusal, including reasons for not completing the primary vaccine series or not receiving booster shots.

The use of the code "Z28.39- Delinquent immunization status" indicates that there may be a trend toward treating vaccine refusal as neglectful or offensive behavior. The term "delinquent" suggests a failure to fulfill one's duty, which implies that vaccine refusal could eventually be viewed as a criminal offense.

Although vaccine refusal is not currently considered a criminal offense, the use of such language in the ICD codes suggests that the landscape of vaccine mandates and laws could change in the future. The inclusion of these codes raises important questions about the extent of medical privacy rights and the potential consequences for those who refuse vaccines.

What are the Risks of Ignoring This?

Malone has pointed out that there is a concerning trend towards the creation of a vaccine passport system by the administrative state, which may already be in the works without the awareness of most Americans.

According to Malone, individuals will not need to provide their vaccine status information since it will be obtained through their healthcare providers and tracked by the CDC.

The CDC already has access to the records of individuals and can easily update them with booster information. All that remains is for a few definitions to be adjusted, or for President Biden to extend the COVID-19 public health emergency indefinitely. In either case, the implementation of vaccine passports would become a "fait accompli," which means that it would be an irreversible and settled fact without any possibility of turning back.

How You Can Be Billed for Being Unvaxxed

Doctors can now bill patients' insurance for "immunization safety counseling," thanks to a new ICD-10 code. If you decline a vaccine or are hesitant to receive one, your doctor can use this code to bill your insurance for counseling you on vaccine safety, even if you don't want it.

This may be automatic, as codes are available to identify whether you declined the COVID-19 vaccine or any other vaccine, and there are codes to detail why you refused it. One of these codes, Z.28.1, can qualify you for immunization safety counseling, regardless of your wishes.

The American Academy of Pediatrics' Pediatric Coding Newsletter published the immunization safety counseling code, Z71.85, in September 2021.

It instructs physicians and healthcare professionals to use this code when reporting counseling provided to vaccine-hesitant patients or caregivers who wish to follow an alternative immunization schedule or require longer counseling sessions than usual.

Doctors are also required to document the time spent on preventive medicine counseling and immunization administration counseling separately to support the claim that the preventive medicine counseling was significant and separately identifiable.

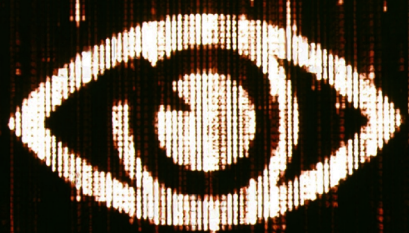

As if everything wasn't oppressive and malevolent enough, now we can be billed for not following their agenda.

No One is Talking About This

We are told that mainstream media is the most reliable form of news and that we shouldn't trust any other form of media. However, there are some undeniable facts that indicate that mainstream media is not entirely as independent and unbiased as they claim to be.

Firstly, it's important to acknowledge that the mainstream media is owned by a handful of corporations. These corporations have vested interests in various industries, such as pharmaceuticals, technology, and finance, among others. As a result, their coverage of events and issues may be influenced by their financial interests. This means that the news we receive may not be entirely accurate or objective but rather tailored to fit the interests of these corporations.

Secondly, it's crucial to understand that the mainstream media is heavily influenced by governments. This is not to say that the government controls the media directly, but there are often informal relationships and agreements between the two.

FLAGGED

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

In many cases, the media may be more likely to report on stories that the government approves of and less likely to cover stories that the government doesn't want to be reported on. The COVID jab is an excellent example of how the mainstream media is not entirely reliable. While the vaccine has been hailed as the solution to the "pandemic", there have been numerous reports of adverse reactions and deaths caused by the vaccine.

Despite this, the mainstream media has largely ignored these reports, choosing instead to focus on the benefits of the vaccine. This suggests that they may not be reporting the whole truth about the vaccine, perhaps because it doesn't fit their narrative or agenda.

It's also worth noting that alternative forms of media, such as social media and independent journalism, have become increasingly popular in recent years.

This is because people are becoming more aware of the limitations and biases of mainstream media and are seeking out alternative sources of information. While there are undoubtedly some risks associated with these forms of media, they do provide a platform for alternative perspectives and voices that may not be represented in mainstream media.

Ultimately, the mainstream media is not always reliable, and we should not rely solely on it for our news and information. While it's essential to consume news from a variety of sources and to be critical of the information we receive, it's also essential to be aware of the potential biases and limitations of the media we consume.

The deadly COVID jab is just one example of how the mainstream media may not always report the whole truth, and it's up to us as individuals to seek out alternative sources of information and form our own opinions based on the facts available.

Let's take Australia's economic capital, Canberra, for example. They were applauded for having an extremely high population of people who have taken the COVID clot shot. Yet no major media outlet has reported the proportionate deaths related to the COVID "vaccine"!

HOW WORKERS ARE BEING AFFECTED

Since the COVID-19 “pandemic” began, there was a big push towards fear-mongering. The news stations made the public believe that COVID-19 was the of the worst outbreaks in history and that anyone who doesn’t “follow the science” is a danger to society. Now we have workers that are being unfairly penalized or discriminated against for choosing not to take the global government’s “solution”.

One example of unfair treatment of unvaxxed workers is in the healthcare industry. In many hospitals and medical facilities, workers who choose not to get vaccinated are being threatened with job loss or suspension. This has led to protests and legal challenges by workers who argue that they should not be forced to get vaccinated.

Another industry where unvaxxed workers are facing discrimination is in the travel and hospitality sectors. Many airlines, cruise lines, and hotels are requiring vaccination for employees, and some are even requiring proof of vaccination for customers.

This has led to concerns about equity and access, as not everyone is able to get vaccinated due to health or logistical reasons.

The restaurant industry has also been a site of controversy over vaccination requirements for workers. In some states and cities, restaurants and bars are requiring proof of vaccination for entry, and some employers are requiring vaccination for their workers.

This has led to protests by workers who argue that they should not be required to disclose their vaccination status or get vaccinated to keep their jobs.

Unvaccinated workers are also facing discrimination in education. Many colleges and universities are requiring vaccination for students and staff, and some K-12 schools are requiring vaccination for teachers and staff. This has led to concerns about privacy and medical autonomy, as well as questions about whether vaccination should be required for education.

The legal and ethical implications of requiring vaccination for workers are complex. On one hand, employers have a duty to protect the health and safety of their workers and customers. On the other hand, workers have a right to medical autonomy and privacy, and some may have legitimate reasons for not getting vaccinated, such as medical or religious reasons.

The issue of unvaxxed workers also raises questions about equity and access. Not everyone has equal access to vaccines, and some people may have legitimate reasons for not getting vaccinated, such as medical conditions or logistical barriers. Employers need to consider these factors and work to ensure that all workers are treated fairly and equitably, regardless of their vaccination status.

FLAGGED

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

As we have shown so far, the treatment of unvaxxed workers raises complex legal and ethical issues that demand attention. While employers are misguided by false information and feel they are protecting the health and safety of their workers and customers, they also need to respect workers' rights to medical autonomy and privacy. Ultimately, there is NO excuse!

The Attacks on Ordinary Workers

It's unfortunate that we are seeing reports of unvaxxed teachers being targeted because of their refusal to take the COVID jab. It was revealed in early February that New York City teachers who had not received the COVID vaxx were marked with a "problem code" in their personnel records, resulting in their fingerprints being sent to the FBI and the New York Criminal Justice Services.

The purpose of this action is unclear, but Michael Kane, a former public school teacher and founder of Teachers for Choice, believes that unvaxxed teachers were being targeted as potential "right-wing extremists" or even "terrorists." Kane himself was fired for refusing the so-called vaccine. The revelation that teachers' fingerprints were illegally entered into two criminal databases is likely to result in additional legal action, according to Kane.

A group of New York City teachers who were terminated from their jobs due to being anti-vax had previously filed a lawsuit on constitutional grounds. However, while the case is still pending before the 2nd U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals, some of these same teachers have now filed a new lawsuit against the city. This time, they are claiming that the state constitution was violated on the basis of their freedom of religion rights.

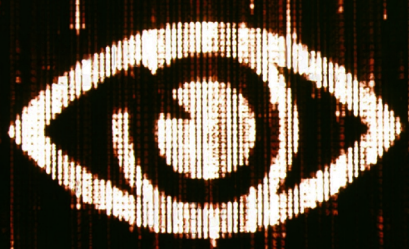

(Image source: Michael M. Santiago via Getty Images)

The new lawsuit alleges that the city's vaccine mandate violates the teachers' constitutional rights to religious freedom under the New York State Constitution.

The plaintiffs argue that the mandate forces them to choose between their sincerely held religious beliefs and their employment, which is a violation of their rights under the state constitution.

The previous lawsuit, filed on constitutional grounds, is still ongoing. However, the addition of this new lawsuit based on religious freedom rights is likely to complicate matters for the city and further delay the resolution of the issue.

The petitioners are seeking to have the vaccine mandate overturned, and the termination of their employment declared unconstitutional.

The recent developments in the case of New York City teachers who were fired for refusing to receive the COVID shot raise important questions about the future of vaccination mandates for other professions.

It is possible that other unvaxxed professionals, such as lawyers, professors, and businessmen, may also face similar treatment as the teachers.

As more businesses and institutions begin to require proof of vaccination for entry, it is likely that some workplaces may follow suit and require employees to be vaxxed as well. This could potentially result in a situation where a vaccine card is needed to access one's workplace or meet with clients on-site.

The possibility of vaccine mandates raises important ethical and legal questions about individual freedoms, privacy, and discrimination. While public health concerns are an important consideration, it is important to balance these concerns with the rights of individuals.

It is not a question of if, but when, vaccine mandates will become widespread in other professions. Based on what we've seen so far, and what we know of their agenda, what happened to the teachers in New York City is only just the beginning of their discrimination against unvaxxed professionals.

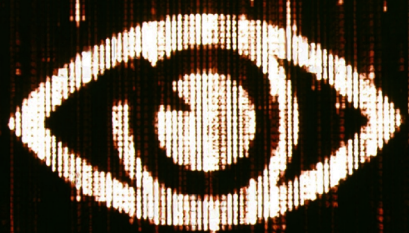

The Limitation of Real Freedoms

Before we go onto how the global governments are limiting our real freedoms, let's define what freedom is. Freedom is a concept that is central to human life and society. It generally refers to the ability of an individual or group to act or think as they wish, without interference or constraint from external forces. Freedom can take many different forms, including political freedom, economic freedom, religious freedom, and personal freedom.

At its core, freedom is about the ability to make choices and exercise autonomy over one's life. This can include the freedom to express one's opinions, practice one's religion, pursue one's career goals, form relationships, and live according to one's own values and beliefs.

However, freedom is not absolute and must be balanced against other important values, such as public safety, social order, and the rights of others. For example, an individual's freedom of speech may be limited if it incites violence or hate speech, and an individual's freedom to own property may be limited by zoning laws or environmental regulations.

Overall, freedom is a complex and multifaceted concept that is central to human flourishing and the functioning of democratic societies. It requires careful balancing of competing values and interests, and a commitment to respect and protect the rights and freedoms of all individuals. Now that we know what freedom is, let's dive into how the global governments are restricting us to fit into their agenda.

FLAGGED

How the Global Government is Tracking, Fingerprinting, and Controlling the Unvaxxed

As we know so far, the global government's push for the COVID passport has caused shocking results in the lives of the unvaxxed. As we learned earlier, freedom can be summarized as the ability to make choices and exercise autonomy over one's life, whilst still keeping the best interest of others at heart. However, the government has been manipulating and weaponizing this to force vaccination, all in the name of looking out for those around us. What freedom do we have if we cannot even decide whether to get vaxxed or not? If we do, we are a "happy and compliant citizen, looking out for those around us". If we don't, we are villainized and treated poorly by even those closest to us due to the brainwashing that the global governments have done.

So we then find ourselves in a difficult situation where if we wish to maintain our real freedoms, we are public enemy number one and face covert restrictions on our freedom. If we comply and take their "solution", we give up our autonomous decision-making and face serious health risks down the line unless we find a way to detoxify ourselves.

We are Being Watched

At first, this might trigger some denial, but the reason for this is that it deeply violates our privacy and trust in those that we thought were in power to serve and protect us. Like Former US president Abraham Lincoln famously said during his Gettysburg Address on the 19th of November 1863; the government is "of the people, by the people, for the people". This is what we have been ingrained with. It's unfortunate to see how things have unfolded.

During the initial stages of the pandemic, many people across the globe trusted government officials who claimed they required confidential information to develop new technology that could contain the spread of the coronavirus. However, in exchange for this information, governments obtained a vast amount of private health data, facial recognition measurements, and the home addresses of individuals.

The Associated Press has now discovered that authorities in various cities worldwide, including Beijing, Jerusalem, Hyderabad, India, and Perth, Australia, have misused this technology and private data to impede the travel of activists and ordinary citizens, target marginalized communities, and link individuals' health data to other surveillance and law enforcement tools.

There were instances where confidential data was shared with espionage agencies. With China's strict zero-COVID policies drawing international criticism, the issue has gained fresh urgency almost three years into the pandemic. This has resulted in the most severe public condemnation of China's authoritarian leadership since the pro-democracy protests in Tiananmen Square in 1989.

Over the course of more than a year, AP journalists conducted interviews with sources and sifted through thousands of documents to uncover how technologies marketed as tools to "flatten the curve" of the pandemic were repurposed for other uses. COVID-19 has provided officials with justification to integrate tracking tools into society, which have persisted long after lockdowns. This shift in the balance between privacy and national security is reminiscent of the changes that took place after the September 11 terrorist attacks.

WHAT THE END GOAL IS AND HOW IT AFFECTS US

While many argue that all of the above is necessary to ensure public health, they simply are ignoring the truth behind the global government's agenda. The Bible speaks to the importance of protecting individual privacy and autonomy and warns against the malevolent intentions of those who seek to control and manipulate others.

Proverbs 29:10 states, "The bloodthirsty hate a person of integrity and seek to kill the upright." This verse highlights the danger of those who seek to control others through deceit and manipulation and reminds us of the importance of standing up for what is right, even in the face of opposition.

The tracking of the unvaxxed raises concerns about potential abuses of power, and the use of technology to monitor and control people's movements and behavior.

Governments and private companies have proposed a variety of tracking methods, including digital vaccine passports, tracking apps, and even implantable microchips. While some argue that these measures are necessary to protect public health and control the spread of the virus, others see them as a violation of individual rights and privacy.

The Bible speaks to the importance of protecting individual autonomy and warns against the dangers of those who seek to control and manipulate others.

Proverbs 22:28 states, "Do not move an ancient boundary stone set up by your ancestors." This verse reminds us of the importance of respecting the boundaries and traditions that have been established by our ancestors, and the danger of those who seek to undermine them.

The tracking of the unvaxxed raises concerns about the erosion of individual rights and the establishment of new boundaries and norms.

In addition to concerns about privacy and individual rights, the tracking of the unvaxxed raises concerns about discrimination and inequality. Those who are unable or unwilling to get vaccinated may be unfairly targeted and discriminated against, particularly in contexts such as employment or travel.

The Bible speaks to the importance of treating others with respect and dignity and warns against the dangers of discrimination and prejudice.

James 2:9 states, "But if you show partiality, you are committing sin and are convicted by the law as transgressors." This verse reminds us of the importance of treating all people equally, regardless of their race, ethnicity, or beliefs. The tracking of unvaccinated individuals raises concerns about potential discrimination against those who are unable or unwilling to get vaccinated and highlights the importance of treating all people with respect and dignity.

Ultimately, the tracking of the unvaxxed raises important ethical and moral concerns, including concerns about individual rights, privacy, discrimination, and inequality. Remember, we are in the minority of people who actually know and accept these harsh truths and reject comforting lies. As Proverbs 29:10 reminds us, we must stand up for what is right, even in the face of opposition, and protect the dignity and autonomy of all people.

The End Goal of Global Tracking

The use of global tracking systems to monitor the unvaxxed is just one part of a larger agenda to introduce COVID passports and vaccine cards as a means of regulating and controlling the population. These digital documents are being touted as a way to “safely” reopen society, allowing only those who are vaccinated to participate in certain activities, such as travel, attending events, or even going to work.

While in the “sheepless” minds this may seem like a reasonable approach to protecting public health, the reality is that it could have far-reaching consequences for personal freedoms and human rights. By tying access to basic services and activities to vaccination status, governments are essentially creating a two-tiered society, where those who refuse to get vaccinated are effectively excluded from participating fully in society.

This is a form of coercive control that has no place in a democratic society. It is also a slippery slope towards a more totalitarian approach to governance, where individual rights and freedoms are sacrificed in the name of public health and safety. In addition, it raises serious questions about population control, with some suggesting that vaccine mandates and COVID passports are being used as a means of controlling population growth.

Furthermore, the use of COVID passports and vaccine cards could lead to discrimination and social division. It could create a situation where individuals are pitted against one another based on their vaccination status, with those who are unvaccinated being stigmatized and marginalized.

This could also exacerbate existing inequalities, as those who are unable to get vaccinated due to health reasons or lack of access to vaccines are unfairly penalized.

There are no legitimate grounds for this to ever be in effect. This is just one part of a larger agenda to introduce COVID passports and vaccine cards as a means of regulating and controlling the population.

This approach has serious ethical and moral implications and could have far-reaching consequences for personal freedoms, human rights, and social cohesion. It is therefore important that we remain vigilant and informed about these developments, and work together to find solutions that are both effective and ethical.

Just by having a look at the shocking mortality rate from OpenVAERS.com, we can see we are indeed faced with an extreme ultimatum. Also note, OpenVAERS.com only shows 1% of the true statistics! Either we take the global government's "solution" to COVID-19 and face these shocking side effects. Or we resist, face being tracked globally, and choose to fight back. Based on the evidence, the latter option is the wisest. We cannot allow ourselves to be strong-armed into going along with the malevolent agenda of the global governments. Taking a stand for what is right can often be a difficult and lonely road. It requires a great deal of courage to stand up against the status quo and the prevailing attitudes of the society around us. This is especially true when it comes to resisting the global tracking systems that are being implemented in the name of controlling the spread of COVID-19.

In many cases throughout history, those who have taken a stand for the right cause have faced persecution, ridicule, and even physical harm. They have been ostracized by their communities, labeled as troublemakers or even traitors, and subjected to all manner of unfair treatment.

Yet, despite these hardships, they have persisted in their cause and have ultimately been seen as heroes for their actions. These individuals have often been driven by a strong sense of morality and a deep commitment to justice. They have recognized the fundamental importance of protecting the rights of individuals to privacy and bodily autonomy, and have been willing to fight for these rights even in the face of overwhelming opposition.

It is up to each of us to decide whether we will stand up for what is right, or whether we will simply go along with the prevailing attitudes of the society around us. This can be a difficult decision, especially when it means alienating ourselves from those in our community who may not share our views. However, it is important to remember that history favors those who have taken a stand for what is right, even in the face of persecution and ridicule. These individuals have been seen as heroes, not only for their actions but for the moral courage and integrity that they have displayed.

So, if we are to take a stand against global tracking systems and fight for our right to privacy and bodily autonomy, we must be willing to face the consequences of our actions. We must be willing to stand up for what is right, even if it means standing alone. And we must do so with the knowledge that history will ultimately judge us not by the opinions of those around us, but by the moral principles that guide our actions.

What Methods We can use to Fight Back

As a global citizen, it is crucial to voice your opinion to your elected representatives about these issues. One way to do this is to contact your Congressional representative and let them know your stance on the absurd and malevolent push towards COVID passports and vaccine cards.

One matter you should raise is your support for the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government's investigation. This Subcommittee has been tasked with looking into the use of government institutions and agencies to target individuals based on their political views, beliefs, or affiliations. By expressing your support for this investigation, you are signaling that you are in favor of accountability and transparency in government.

Another issue that you should address is the proposal by the administrative state, the U.N., the WHO, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and the Biden administration to require a vaccine passport or digital ID. You may express your opposition to this proposal, which could be perceived as a violation of individual rights and an infringement of personal liberty. Additionally, you may want to advocate for the freedom of travel for all citizens, regardless of vaccination status.

It is also important to emphasize that you expect your representative to protect your Constitutional rights. You may express your concern about any proposed legislation that could potentially infringe on individual freedoms or privacy. Specifically, with regard to medical privacy, you may want to highlight your desire for your representative to protect your rights to privacy, especially given the potential violation of your medical privacy by the new ICD-10 codes. You may request that your representative take immediate action to ensure the codes are revoked, as they are in violation of your right to privacy.

Lastly, you should also suggest that individuals protect their medical privacy by choosing a private practice physician who is not required to use ICD codes unless they accept insurance. By doing so, they may be able to avoid being tagged and caught up in the system, which can potentially compromise their medical privacy.

By reaching out to your elected representatives, you are taking an active stand against the invasive and absurd agenda of the global governments.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, the use of global tracking systems to monitor the unvaxxed is a concerning development in the global government's agenda. While governments and health authorities claim that this technology is necessary to "control the spread of the virus and protect public health", the use of such invasive methods raises serious ethical and moral questions.

One of the main concerns with global tracking is the potential for misuse and abuse of personal data. With so much personal information being collected and analyzed, there is a real risk of this data being used for other purposes beyond the control of individuals. This could include discrimination, surveillance, and even persecution of certain groups based on their vaccination status.

Moreover, the use of such extreme measures is a worrying trend toward a more authoritarian approach to public health. Rather than encouraging people to make informed decisions about their health, governments are resorting to coercion and manipulation to achieve their goals. This is not only a violation of individual rights and freedoms but also undermines public trust in institutions and scientific advice.

In the face of this global tracking technology, it is important that we remain vigilant and informed. By understanding the truth about these invasive methods, we can better equip ourselves to stand against the government's agenda and protect our personal freedoms.

We must remain united in our fight against the global government's agenda and stand up for our rights and values as individuals. Only by working together can we find a way forward that is both effective and just.

ABOUT JONATHAN OTTO

Jonathan Otto is an investigative journalist, natural health researcher, documentary filmmaker, and humanitarian.

In addition to serving as a producer for The Truth About Cancer and The Truth About Vaccines, Jonathan has created several highly-acclaimed, groundbreaking docuseries — Depression, Anxiety & Dementia Secrets, Autoimmune Secrets, Natural Medicine Secrets, and Autoimmune Answers — covering innovative, effective natural remedies for autoimmune disease, neurodegenerative disease, mental health, cancer, and heart disease.

These docuseries — watched by millions around the world — represent Jonathan's unceasing quest to discover the root causes of debilitating diseases by interviewing over 120 world-renowned natural medicine doctors, scientists, natural health experts, and patients.

In response to this life-saving knowledge, Jonathan created Well of Life, a line of doctor-formulated, 100% natural supplements specially designed to detox and fortify the body.

When the global elite took away the human and medical rights of people around the world — and coerced billions into taking the toxic, experimental COVID “vaccines” — Jonathan was determined to get the truth out, despite being repeatedly censored and deplatformed.

He interviewed the world's top medical doctors, health experts, and legal experts on vaccine injuries who risked their own careers to expose the lies behind the deadly COVID “vaccines” — which have caused deaths and injuries to millions of people — to create his newest docuseries, Vaccine Secrets, COVID Secrets, and Unbreakable: Destined to Thrive.

Jonathan's greatest reward has been hearing the testimonials from people whose lives have literally been saved with the protocols he developed.

His work has been featured in international TV broadcasts, print media, national news, and radio broadcasts. He received the awards, Young Citizen of the Year and International Volunteer of the Year, by the Australian government for international humanitarian contributions, which he continues to support.

Jonathan and his wife, Lori, welcomed their first son, Asher, in January 2019 and their second son, Arthur, in May 2021.
